Editorial Review

From the Author

This book is an exploration about ageplay, age related role-playing. It has sections relevant to people who are just curious, as well as sections for those who are experienced ageplayers already. It addresses issues regarding both people who roleplay or have personality aspects of a very young age, using diapers, as well as those people who are for older ages.

Introducing many of the sections are short works of fiction that illustrate the different points or give an overall view of the section.

Copies of this book are housed in the collections of the Leather Archive Museum, the Kinsey Library, and the Library of Congress.

About the Author

I moved to Chicago over six years ago from Wisconsin after graduating with degrees in psychology and sociology that I happily use (and pervert) as an author, educator and participant in the alternative sexuality community. In addition to teaching and presenting, I enjoy kink in my personal life, identifying as a Top/Dom and a Daddy Dominant.

I began teaching after becoming interested in both expanding my personal knowledge through research and discussion, and helping to educate the community, fostering open discussion and a safe place to learn and share ideas. In general, I mainly focus on different aspects of mental and emotional play, and emotional masochism. I strive for every workshop to be interactive, and I always try to explore the topic from different viewpoints, asking for involvement and participation from the attendees who feel comfortable doing so. Over the past few years I've been incredibly honored to have presented at DomCon- LA, Madtown Kink Fest, Kinky Karnival, as well as many other venues both nationally and throughout the Midwest.

A large part of my interest in kink lies in the area of ageplay. As one of the co-founders of the Chicago Age Players, an NCSF Coalition Partner, I work to try to increase the visibility and acceptability of ageplay in the alternate sexuality community. Recently I authored the book Ageplay: From Diapers to Diplomas, and am the Chairman and Director of Education for CAPCon: The Midwest Ageplay Convention. In addition to my classes on mental and emotional play, I have many that focus on ageplay, and I enjoy creating an atmosphere (both in my classes and at private parties) that allow people the opportunity to both explore and accept aspects of their sexuality.
