The voice acting is excellent, and the production value is astounding. Wally's footsteps pound from one earphone to the next -- voices call from a distance -- explosions ring out in every direction. Televisions play in the background, barely audible at times above the characters' conversations. The traffic rushes along the streets. The sound world created is richly crafted. This audiobook is touted as a "movie in your mind" and it delivers. --SF Site

I really like this series of the JLA books. I like the fact that they take on some of the secondary characters of the Justice League, as well as how the author was able to take all of the physics and motion of the Flash's abilities, and explain it without getting technical and boring. There is also a good balance between focusing on The Flash, and still keeping the others of the JLA involved. --Blogcritics.com

Graphic Audio's "movies in your mind" slogan refers, in part, to their ear-bending special effects, which are in no short supply in THE FLASH: Stop Motion. You've never heard the "fastest man alive" more troubled by his insecurities than in this tale, in which a creature that moves even faster than he does is wrecking Central City. The production shines in its pure audio drama; the capable acting and astonishing sound scheme hurtle you through out-of-this-world action sequences carried out by colorful characters: mad scientists, other-dimensional heroes, and tough cops. If you're looking for pure, unabashedly comic-book action, this production delivers in force. Buckle your seat belt and take a ride with the Flash. F.G. © AudioFile 2009, Portland, Maine
