Editorial Review

About the Author

John Paul Mueller is a freelance author and technical editor. He has writing in his blood, having produced 98 books and more than 600 articles to date. The topics range from networking to home security and from database management to heads-down programming. Some of John's current books include one on Python for beginners and another about MATLAB. His home security book discusses all sorts of hardware issues, including the installation of various sensors. John's technical editing skills have helped more than 63 authors refine the content of their manuscripts. He has provided technical editing services to both Data Based Advisor and Coast Compute magazines. During his time at Cubic Corporation, John was exposed to reliability engineering and has had an interest in probability ever since.

When John isn't working at the computer, you can find him outside in the garden, cutting wood, or generally enjoying nature. He also likes making wine, baking cookies, and knitting. When not occupied with anything else, John makes glycerin soap and candles, which come in handy for gift baskets.
